Deer Lake Draws a Crowd to October 30th Open House

By Clark Judge

When the Board of Directors of Pathfinders, Inc., the nonprofit that bought Deer Lake, met last week, it didn't know how many people to expect for its open house Sunday. One member said 250. Another estimated 300. Nobody went higher. "I just hope people show up," someone said.

They did. In droves.

From beginning (10:00 a.m.) to end (4:00 p.m.) on October 30th, hundreds appeared at the 255-acre Deer Lake property to join a celebration of donors who contributed to the $4.75-million sale and experience the beauty of an environment that State Sen. Christine Cohen accurately described as "magical."

"I was shocked," said Patty Clifton who, with husband Mark, runs the Deer Lake summer youth camp. "When the parking people came over and said they were running out of space, I couldn't believe it."

She can now.

Estimates for the event ranged anywhere from 800 to 1,000 persons, though no one is certain. There was no admission, no tickets and no crowd count. What is known, however, is that the occasion was an unmitigated success.

"It warmed my heart," said Mark Clifton, "to have people I haven't seen in 40 years come by to support the camp. I was gratefully surprised."

The weather was glorious, a sunny afternoon with temperatures in the 60's. The stream of visitors was continuous. Interest was keen, with dozens of persons offering to volunteer for future projects or inquiring about donations. And the sale of concessions, walking sticks, Deer Lake water bottles, Deer Lake sweatshirts, Deer Lake Swag ... you name it ... was brisk.

"It was beyond our expectations," said Ted Langevin, president of Pathfinders. "It was very positive."

That sentiment was echoed by all who were there — from the Boy Scouts who parked cars ... to the Cub Scouts who ran the concessions... to Cohen, who showed off Deer Lake to friends unfamiliar with it ... to conservation groups and naturalists at information booths ... to vendors who sold their wares ... to those who joined guided hikes or rode a hay wagon that toured the property ... and to all in and around Pathfinders who planned and coordinated the event immediately after the September 16, 2022 purchase.

"My biggest takeaway?" said Patty Clifton. "That people care. They wouldn't have come out here if they didn't care."

The occasion was meant to serve two purposes: 1) Celebrate donors who made the Deer Lake purchase possible and 2) expose the property to those who were unaware of it. When Pathfinders bought Deer Lake, it borrowed $1.8 million in low-interest loans to complete the deal. But it can't retire that debt without more donations, and that's unlikely to happen if potential contributors don't know what they're asked to save.

Sunday was that opportunity.

The most asked question Langevin said he heard was, "Is Deer Lake open to the public?" The answer is yes. Some wanted to know if there is weekend camping. Again, the answer is yes. Others were interested in potential retreats, wedding and reunion possibilities, dining-hall rentals, dog walking, overnight cabin stays and, yes, possible Lumberjack Days.

Then there were those who showed up out of curiosity, with Langevin estimating that 20-30 signed up to volunteer for future projects. Others inquired into donations, asking how they could add to the Save Deer Lake fundraising campaign. The interest was sincere, and the passion was genuine.

"I was so impressed with how supportive the community is," said Langevin.

Most persons came from Killingworth and surrounding towns, but other parts of the state were represented. One couple from Milford, for instance, had never been to Deer Lake, but heard about the event and were intrigued. A family from East Haddam wanted to see if it was still open to Scouts. A resident of Hartford asked about kayaking and fishing. A couple from Naugatuck brought their two children to walk the property with grandparents and participate in demonstrations.

"It was fun," said Killingworth resident Linda Shellnut, grandmother to the two youths. "I was struck by how beautiful and precious the spot is. There aren't many places like Deer Lake anymore. Most have been developed or sold or just aren't in your area. The kids absolutely loved it."

To those who could remember, it was reminiscent of the annual Killingworth Town picnic that was held at Deer Lake on Labor Day weekend and involved cow chip bingo (honest), an Army/National Guard jumping team and a softball game between the Lions Club and Volunteer Fire Company. According to those who were there, it was such a popular draw that it attracted 2,000-3,000 persons.

"It could be fun to do again," Mark Clifton said.

Maybe. But the immediate goal for Pathfinders is to raise awareness for the Save Deer Lake campaign and gain the help of volunteers interested in helping to maintain and improve the property. Sunday's open house was a start.

"We need to do a lot of outreach," said former Killingworth First Selectwoman Cathy Iino, a Pathfinders board member, "just to keep in touch with all those people. We need to make sure that all the folks who came through ... and all the others who have supported the effort to save Deer Lake ... continue to feel like part of this great project. The public needs to hear from us regularly."

It just did.

"And it was great," said Cohen. "I think (Sunday) highlighted the beauty of the property. You couldn't have dialed up better weather, and everything went so smoothly. It should help people understand why Pathfinders moved forward and rallied the community as it did and why it needs the amount of help it does going forward."

60 Years Ago: A Connecticut Native's Major Role in Averting Nuclear War in the Cuban Missile Crisis

By Philip R. Devlin

Sixty years ago this week, the Cuban Missile Crisis played out for thirteen tense days in October of 1962. At Premier Nikita Khrushchev's urging, the Soviet Union shipped intermediate-range missiles armed with nuclear warheads to Cuba—far more powerful than the atomic bombs dropped on Hiroshima and Nagasaki. Cuban dictator Fidel Castro, still seething at America for sponsoring the disastrous Bay of Pigs invasion in 1961, welcomed the missiles with open arms. The presence of nuclear missiles just 90 miles from Florida, however, greatly alarmed Americans and brought the world to the brink of nuclear war.

U-2 spy planes confirmed the presence of the missiles, and in one of the most important presidential addresses ever given, President John F. Kennedy informed Americans of their threatening presence on Monday night October 23, 1962. The Joint Chiefs of Staff, led by Air Force General Curtis LeMay, strongly advocated bombing and invading Cuba to remove the threat. Others, such as JFK, United Nations Ambassador Adlai Stevenson, and Secretary of State Dean Rusk, wished to explore a diplomatic solution to the crisis.

The diplomatic solution required time, but the public and political pressure for immediate action was enormous. The very next day Kennedy ordered the military to stand ready at DEFCON 2, the first time in history that the military had been ordered to that heightened alert. (DEFCON 1 is nuclear war.) Thanks in part to the critical actions of a CIA operative and World War II hero from Windsor Locks named Hugh Montgomery, JFK knew that time was on their side. The Kennedy administration aggressively pursued the diplomatic solution while imposing a naval quarantine on Russian shipping to Cuba.

Born in Springfield, Massachusetts on November 29, 1923, Hugh Montgomery (photo above) lived at 42 Elm Street in Windsor Locks. His grandfather, J.R. Montgomery, founded the Montgomery mill on the canal bank in 1871. Hugh attended Windsor Locks public schools from Kindergarten through 8th grade and then commuted to Loomis for secondary school. His mother taught foreign languages at Smith College, and Hugh inherited her aptitude for learning languages. By the time he had graduated from Harvard, Montgomery was fluent in eight languages, including Russian—a factor critical in his role during the Cuban Missile Crisis.

Following the attack on Pearl Harbor, Hugh joined the Army and became a member of the 82nd Airborne Division; in fact, he parachuted into Normandy on D-Day. He was wounded in the leg in France during the Battle of the Falaise Pocket in August of 1944, a wound that caused him to limp for the rest of his life.

Montgomery's proficiency in French and German was not lost on his superior officers, and he soon became part of the OSS—the forerunner of the CIA. He was sent on several key spy missions into Germany; in fact, his undercover four-man team was the first to discover the horror of the Buchenwald concentration camp in April of 1945. He broke radio silence to obtain medical aid for the emaciated prisoners there.

After using the GI Bill to complete his Ph.D. at Harvard, Hugh was recruited to join the CIA in 1953. He remained with the CIA until 2014 when he retired at 91, having served more than 60 years in the agency. Regarded as a “founding father” of the CIA, Montgomery amassed numerous awards in his long career. He served in many diplomatic posts all over the world, but none would equal the importance of his presence in Moscow in 1962.

Montgomery's main job in Moscow was to help manage a Russian double agent named Oleg Penkovsky.

A decorated World War II military hero, Penkovsky had grown embittered at his inability to get promoted and grew disenchanted with Soviet Premier Khrushchev's policies. He decided to defect to the West. Historians regard Penkovsky as one of the most important spies of the 20th century.

Hugh Montgomery had arranged a “dead drop” with Penkovsky at a 4th of July party at the American embassy in Moscow in 1962. Penkovsky was to leave a packet of important material for Montgomery taped to the inside bottom of a toilet tank lid in a bathroom at the embassy. Montgomery's retrieval of the packet became eventful, however, as the toilet tank was an older model located high on a wall for gravity feed. Hugh first stood on the toilet seat to reach it, but the seat was made of wood and splintered. He resorted to standing on the wash basin and successfully reached the packet but fell back as the sink separated from the wall. Montgomery personally translated the Penkovsky documents and promptly sent them to CIA headquarters where the director took them to President Kennedy.

It is hard to overstate the importance of Penkovsky's role in helping JFK defuse the missile crisis. Cold War historian Jerrold L. Schecter put it this way:

“His contributions changed American and British thinking about Nikita Khrushchev's strategic nuclear capabilities and intentions. Penkovsky's material made it clear that the USSR lacked the nuclear missile capability Khrushchev claimed, thus enabling President Kennedy to call Khrushchev's bluff. During the Berlin crisis of 1961 and the Cuban Missile Crisis in 1962, Penkovsky was the spy who saved the world from nuclear war.”

It is also hard to overstate the importance of Windsor Locks native Hugh Montgomery and the other CIA and MI6 operatives (such as British MI6 agents Janet Chisholm and Greville Wynne) who had helped manage Penkovsky and were on the receiving end of his vital information. (See the 2021 movie The Courier starring Benedict Cumberbatch as Wynne.) In total, Penkovsky is estimated to have had 140 hours of interviews with American and British operatives, passed on 111 rolls of film, and more than 10,000 pages of intelligence reports!

It is no surprise that Oleg Penkovsky had a book written about him entitled The Spy Who Saved the World. Unfortunately, Penkovsky was arrested by the KGB on the day before JFK's address to the nation concerning the missile crisis. He was beaten and tortured for weeks before he was found guilty of treason and executed in the spring of 1963. Interestingly and appropriately, Penkovsky's CIA code name was “HERO.” Without American and British operatives such as Hugh Montgomery, however, the transfer of Penkovsky's vital information that enabled the Kennedy administration to resolve the Cuban Missile Crisis peacefully would have never occurred.

November Events

By Tammy Eustis, Killingworth Library Association

Upcoming events in November at Killingworth Library:

New Date! (This program was originally scheduled for October)

Tuesday, November 8, at 7:00 p.m. – Turtles & the Sins of Good Samaritans. Adults are invited to enjoy this fascinating talk by Pamela Meier, state-permitted wildlife rehabilitator and local resident. Turtles are one of the oldest yet most threatened groups of animals on earth. Five of Connecticut's eight resident turtle species are on the state's List of Endangered, Threatened or Special Concern Species. As one of the state's few experienced rehabilitators specializing in turtles, Pam will share her knowledge about the harm done by well-meaning, but misinformed individuals, and how you can make a difference! Space is limited, so please register in advance by visiting the Calendar on the library's website: killingworthlibrary.org – or call the library at 860-663-2000.

Holiday Pajama Storytime

Thursday, November 17, 6:00-6:30 p.m. Come dressed to cuddle and bring your favorite stuffed animal! We'll have some holiday treats on hand, and Mrs. Fig will share some of her favorite holiday tales. Family members of all ages are welcome. Please register in advance, so we know how many friends to expect. Visit the Calendar on the library's website (killingworthlibrary.org) or call the library at 860-663-2000.

Sign Up for Tech Time!

The library continues to offer tech support for patrons who need help navigating their phones, laptops, Microsoft Office, and more. Whether you want to download e-books and e-audios from the library's webpage, discover Google Docs, or just want to know how to turn off those pesky alerts, we're happy to help! Please contact the library at 860-663-2000 to arrange a day and time to meet with library staff.

Killingworth Library November Holidays

The library will be open on Veterans Day, Friday, November 11, for regular hours, 9:00 a.m.-6:00 p.m. The library will be closed for Thanksgiving on Thursday, November 24, but open for regular hours all other days of that week. (Friday's Music with Margie and Cricut classes will not meet the week of Thanksgiving.)

HADDAM POET LAUREATE

The Unleaving

Even without the sun, the Norway maple,
a species now spurned, radiates red.
Sugar maples stand nearby
their dependable yellow turning to melon and thinning. Pin oaks hold on to their stubborn green.
The cherry, green all summer, journeys
to maroon.
The white birch-her pale hearts have already swooned to the ground, losing her will in a weeping drape.
I spend too much time absorbing their glory
Not tending to what needs doing.
But how much other doing is needed?
Their leaves drop gently, a last dance in
the breeze,
A snap on the fulcrum of autumn and
drift,

their dry patter sounding like rain.
And then it does rain.
Only cedar and spruce will stand green through the winter, shouldering the snow.
But for today, this deciduous tribe,
all get along with their varied hues and habits
amenable to this acreage, resilient in their acceptance of accidental
immigrants and the hopefuls planted by my own hand, replacing ash trees
now blighted into memory.
As sadness is layered with many reasons
so comes the progress of this season,
while I position pumpkins and mums
on the porch, just so.
Just so.

33 New State Troopers Graduate From Academy, Take Assignments Across Connecticut

By Connecticut State Police

The Connecticut State Police graduated 33 new State Troopers on October 20, all members of the 132nd Training Troop.

James C. Rovella, Commissioner of the Department of Emergency Services and Public Protection, and Colonel Stavros Mellekas, Commander of the State Police, congratulated the graduating class during a ceremony held at Central Connecticut State University. Governor Ned Lamont and Lieutenant Governor Susan Bysiewicz also attended and addressed the graduates.

The 132nd Training Troop entered the Connecticut State Police Training Academy on April 8, 2022, with classes starting in a blended learning format. On May 9th, the class began the residential portion of the Academy, Monday through Friday, and completed the remaining 24 weeks of training. This is the second class to graduate the State Police Training Academy in 2022; 53 members of the 131st Training Troop graduated on March 24th.

In total, the class completed 28 weeks and more than 1,400 hours of training both online and in person. In addition to classwork, the recruits spend many hours on physical conditioning, driving, firearms training, active shooter response, experiential training and other specialized areas of police work. Five members of the class started the selections process (including the physical agility) while deployed to Africa as part of a joint effort with State Police and the Connecticut National Guard.

The 33 members of this class include 30 men and 3 women. Members of the 132nd Training Troop have diverse backgrounds, training and experience. Some are former municipal police officers or correction officers, some have been trained as firefighters and EMTs and some have military backgrounds. The youngest member of the class is 21 years old and the oldest is 52 years old.

Among the 33 graduates:

- 11 have military experience
- 1 has prior law enforcement experience
- 11 hold Bachelor's Degrees
- 3 hold advanced degrees

At their graduation on October 20th, the newest Troopers were sworn in by Colonel Mellekas and assigned to one of 11 State Police troops located throughout Connecticut.

The graduating Troopers will be assigned as follows:

- Troop A, Southbury – 2 new Troopers
